The painting is done on paper pasted on a round plate of kiri wood and signed on the right Hasegawa Sadanobu ga, with a red artist's seal. On top there is a small copper pull and the reverse is padded with silk. Diameter 24,5 cm. Late 1830's - early 1840's.

The actor's previous stage name was Matsue III, which he gave up to ascend to the illustrious Tomijūrō name in the first month of 1833. He was a celebrated onnagata known as the "Grand Courtesan of Osaka (Naniwa no tayū, also read as "Master of Osaka"). His ostentatious lifestyle brought him into conflict with the bakufu's sumptuary edicts and he was banned from Osaka in 1843. He thereafter performed elsewhere in Kamigata, including Sakai, Kyoto, Ise, and Nagoya, where he continued to thrive and receive acclaim for his acting skill. For this kind of mirror covers see Ujlaki 2006.
